

When we give up diversity in media ownership we assume that the beneficiary of our largess will not abuse the gift we gave them. In the case of Pappas Telecommunications, we have been deceived. If money means so much to media executives, then they should get into a more respectable profession, like robbing banks.